

Wikipedia Article Microsite - Initial Build Discussion

Notes Creative Director: Annie Tian | Designer/Developer: Rocio Laucerica

What's working –

- The color palette works really well on each page and makes the whole site look very cohesive
- I really like how mostly consistently hovered clickable text turns yellow, it makes everything very clear and easily understandable. I also love all of the images and graphics of miffy.
 - All of this makes the site really easy to navigate and understand while still being interactive and visually interesting for children

Areas for Improvement / Next Steps

- Resolution of the main image of the home page – it looks slightly pixelated/fuzzy at full desktop
- Some of the buttons/their hovers could be a bit higher contrast like when hovering over watch now in the media section or the view map in the sightings, it changes ever so slightly.
- For the mobile layout
 - Could figure out how to condense the navigation bar, maybe consider a hamburger menu button, because currently it kind of clips of the screen
 - Could maybe simplify the footer as well and make it smaller especially in the mobile version